DEFENCE

During Mr. Fisher's recent visit to your Headquarters, he discussed with General Birdwood the employment of Mr. Will Dyson, the Australian artist, to do certain work in connection with our troops, which has been approved by the Commonwealth Government and endorsed by General Birdwood in a letter to Captain Collins.

The idea is that he should provide us with a permanent pictorial record of Australia at war, and give us, through the medium of his pen and brush, the peculiar individuality of the Australian soldier. The War Office have been asked to sanction his visit to France, but his civilian status is against him, and the most they will do is to give permission for him to join one of the weekly parties of journalists which go across. His work, if it is to constitute the record we desire, must be the result of close and intimate acquaintance with the life and doings of our men in the field, and weekly visits, irregularly made, would not enable him to portray his subject really faithfully.

Mr. Fisher urges that he be granted an honorary commission in the A.I.F. He desires no pay - simply payment of his carriage and keep. We, of course, would have to invite the consent of the War office to utilise his services in this special way, but if we were to indicate our willingness to grant him an honorary commission their scruples would probably be overcome, and they would grant us the permission we seek.

He is now engaged on work at Salsbury P. which he should complete in the course of a few weeks, and as these matters take some time to arrange with the War Office, I should be very glad of your views on the matter. If you approve, will you please instruct me?
